How To Build A Rockstar Team

and have a great team of millennials.

by: Brett Lechtenberg

How to build a rockstar team
and have a great team of millennials

One of the greatest things you can do as a business owner is create amazing opportunities for your employees.

In the pages that follow I am going to give you a checklist of concepts, strategies and techniques that I have used in my businesses with great success.

After 23 years running my own businesses and weathering some of the most difficult economic circumstances our country has ever faced and also surviving some very serious personal and business mistakes, I can say without a doubt that there were some important keys that allowed me to survive and thrive when many others were not so fortunate.

This report focuses on only one of those keys - Building a rockstar team.

The other keys like staff training, customer service, etc. I will save for my coaching programs.

Key points to remember:

1. Your clients/customers will be treated the same way you treat your staff.
2. Everyone wants to feel that the work they do is appreciated.
3. The longevity of your business will largely be determined by the quality of your team.

Teamwork Makes the Dream Work

How To Build A Rockstar Team

The following are my fifteen best strategies and over 40 specific action items you can immediately implement to develop a long term dedicated team of conscientious and caring people.

1. Refer to the staff as a TEAM

2. Treat them like rock stars - they will treat the members the way they are being treated.

3. Build a reputation for your team members:

   a. Tell members and others how great your team members are

   b. Make Facebook posts about how great your team members are.

   c. Hype up your team members in front of your clients.

6. Give your team rockstar rewards

   a. Buy them lunch

   b. Take them to dinner

   c. Give them unexpected bonus/gifts

   d. Offer them a late arrival or an early departure

   e. Recognize their birthdays or special occasions

   f. Bring them their favorite coffee

7. Employee of the month

   a. Lunch with the manager

b. Recognize them on Facebook

c. $50 American express card

8. Thank them and be specific with your praise

a. Great job with X

b. Keep up the good work with Y

9. Connect on a personal level and make them feel like family

a. Ask questions that show you care

b. Remember important events in their lives

c. Follow up on positive and negative events that happen

d. Offer support

10. Spend time with your team outside of work

a. Hire people you want to hang out with

b. Have a team activity once a month or at least once per quarter

11. Give your team ownership

a. Let them create

b. Give them projects

c. Challenge them to participate in the marketing, training, etc.

d. Establish their boundaries

e. Ask their opinion

f. Give them an appropriate forum to express themselves

g. Create a Facebook group

12. Give them control where appropriate

a. Set them up for success

b. Communicate your experience

c. Allow them to make their own mistakes

d. Move forward with lessons learned

13. Give your team feedback

a. Engage everyday

b. Know what motivates your team

c. Pre-shift pep talk - ensure people know what they are supposed to do

d. Post shift feedback

14. Invest in their progress

a. Train with them

b. Notice their improvements

c. Review expectations - communicate the goal every day!

15. Communicate the vision

a. Be specific about the destination and the route or your business

b. Allow your team to find their place within the vision

c. Be congruent with your words and actions

Another topic of great debate over the last couple of years has revolved around millennials and their work ethic.

As someone who has had several millennials as team members, I can tell you that most of the time the problem is not the millennial per say. It is that we pick the wrong person for the position we want filled and then problem is compounded because we don't understand how to train and communicate with that new hire effectively.

Again, I am not going to go into proper hiring and training practices in this manual but instead give you some helpful tactics for working with your millennial team members. This is a blog article I wrote in June, 2016 that is just as relevant as when I wrote it. It will give you some valuable input on how to work with our modern millennial work force.

Millennials – Good for business or the bane of your existence?
Many business owners, I talk with, complain about how they can not find good help. They also make disparaging remarks about millennials and their work ethic.

Here are the most common comments I hear about millennials.

Millennials:

1. Are too entitled and they they want more money than they are worth.

2. Quit jobs and just follow the next shiny thing.

3. Are too social and they don't have a good work ethic.

4. Only care about themselves.

Of course this list could be much bigger but you get the point.

Here is my personal observation and experience and it may sting a bit but…

I have several millennials on my payroll (8 at the moment), I love having them and here is why.

Millennials:

1. Do have a sense of entitlement!

Why, because we taught them to. We have told them that they can change the world. The problem is when we get them in our business we don't talk to them about changing the world, we talk to them almost exclusively about raising the bottom line. Why not teach them the correllation between the two?

TEACH THEM HOW and they will change your world.

2. Do quit jobs for the next shiny thing!

They want to make a difference! Millennials want a cause and want to be part of something bigger and that is AWESOME.

Train them about the "WHY" of your business they will work hard and your business will grow. You will grow because you ARE the shiny thing.

If this is a new concept for you then check out Simon Sinek's TED talk about knowing your why. Here is the link – http://www.ted.com/talks/simon_sinek_how_great_leaders_inspire_action

3. Yes, they are extremely social! So what? This is the way of the new world.

Simply ask your millennial to turn off their phone and stay off of Snapchat, Tik Tok, Youtube and Facebook and they will if they are working on something that grows the business and themselves.

However, it's even better to actually give them some duties and time, that allows them to express themselves and how awesome your business is on social media. You will actually see a growth in business or at the very least more LOYALTY to your business with your current customers.

4. No, they do not only care about themselves; that is an unfounded perception.

Of course there are selfish children in the world but there are just as many selfish adults.

Remember:

Millennials are so far ahead of us when we were their age, that it's mind boggling. Shame on us for not staying up to date, and ahead of the curve.

Helpful tips to hiring a great team - INCLUDING MILLENNIALS:

1. Make sure the people you hire actually had to "jump through some hoops" to apply for a job.
2. Ensure your staff/team all know why you do what you do and why it makes a difference. A Vision Blueprint is a great tool for this.
3. Treat your team like people and not a number.
4. Make sure your team members understand exactly how to achieve their next pay raise.

5. Properly correct their behavior when they make a mistake.
   There are some who still cling to the old Praise, Correct, Praise method of correction. I would invite you to consider that you will have far greater success by using more sound psychological models. Here is a more up to date correction model and a simple example.

P – Praise

A – Ask permission

P – Praise

Simplistic example:

Nice try on XXXX, unfortunately I see that XXX did not really work out. May, I show you how to make XXX work better next time? Good job, now you have it.

Wrapping up:
Of course there are several other things you could be doing to create a rockstar team of millennials but this will get you off to a good start.

Dedicated to Your Success

Brett Lechtenberg

There you have it!

If you implement even half of the strategies from this manual, you will be far ahead of most of your competitors.

Please feel free to share this information with anyone you think can benefit.

If you would like more valuable content like this report then please feel free to check out all of my FREE goodies on my website.

Click the link for more FREE tools: https://www.brettlechtenberg.com

Brett Lechtenberg is a best-selling author, speaker, business consultant and seventh degree black belt. He is the founder/creator of Category of One, and Operation Limitless. Brett is a pioneer in the field of personal empowerment, confidence coaching, leadership development and branding.

Brett's Category of One business development program is the hidden, secret weapon, behind the design and development of businesses ranging from dog trainers, home inspectors, martial arts school owners and many others. When business owners want to skyrocket their confidence, gain massive clarity, improve productivity, and smash through their limiting bottlenecks – they call Brett.

His high powered marketing, staff training, and mindset training systems are used by 100's of business owners who want to reach more high paying clients and customers without the use of unpredictable and sleazy business tactics.

You can contact Brett directly via email at Brett@BrettLechtenberg.com

Follow Brett on Facebook https://www.facebook.com/brettlechtenberg

Follow Brett on YouTube http://www.youtube.com/user/brettl99

How To Build A Rockstar Team

By: Brett Lechtenberg